

Best for cruisers: Alaska's Inside Passage

Dreaming of epic views while relaxing with a coffee or a cocktail? A 7-day cruise through the Alaska Inside Passage is perfect for travelers looking for a relaxing adventure. Many cruise lines, like Holland America, have created a refined atmosphere and offer enrichment programs that cater to mature guests with music venues, nature talks and quiet lounges. You'll sail past glaciers, go on excursions to spot whales and stop in charming ports like Juneau and Ketchikan—all without the hassle and effort of packing and repacking at each new location.

Best road trip: Utah's Mighty 5

“Road trips are great because you can pack everything you need and you don't have to worry about assistive equipment being lost or damaged,” says blogger Candy Harrington, who writes about travel for wheelchair and walker users on EmergingHorizons.com. Travel blogger Charlotte Simpson (@travelingblackwidow) agrees, “I love driving through any of the 63 national parks across the country—each one is unique and fabulous.” The top of her list is the Mighty 5 in Utah—Zion, Bryce Canyon, Arches, Canyonlands and Capitol Reef—because they're easy to drive between. Simpson's tip: “Get an America the Beautiful Senior Pass for those 62 and up, which runs $20 for an annual pass or $80 for a lifetime pass. It offers free entry to all parks plus additional discounts.”
